MUSIC NOTES

"Keeping The Faith"

By Mark T. Gould

I've been reading, actually re-reading and, in turn, being re-mesmerized by, author Ted Gioia's monumental, indispensable blues history, "Delta Blues," a truly classical work that casts the profound eye of both devotee and scholar on the origins of this all-so-genuine American music from the soil, plantations and prisons of the deep South to its migration north and its subsequent revival to a truly deserved place as the ultimate American roots music.

As a longtime blues fan, I am engrossed, yet again for the third time through this wondrous tome, on Gioia's meticulous research and writing about the early country acoustic blues artists who paved the way for the later popularity of the music, but whom, for many, were lost in their time. Surely, any blues fan knows the names Robert Johnson, Blind Lemon Jefferson, Charley Patton, Son House, Skip James as well as other influential artists of the genre, but the glory of this book is Gioia's written history of the comparatively little-known achievements of lesser known, but, as the author offers ample evidence, equally important blues artists like Tommy Johnson, Willie Brown, Geeshie Wiley, and others, whose contributions might, without Gioia's devoted scholarship, be lost to the ages.

As such, it is bittersweet to read about all these great bluesmen and women, the famous and the not-so, for whom their names, their legacy, and, most tragically, their music, is all but an extinct footnote, so appallingly and terribly left in the past, with seemingly no one to continue its level of influence and import in the vanguard of American popular music.

That, for one, depresses me greatly.

But, then, all is not forsaken. If you think rural country blues is a lost, or worse, forgotten, art, better relegated to museums and other dusty institutions, let me introduce you to bluesman/performer extraordinaire Toby Walker.

Channeling all the greats, be it House, James, Robert Johnson, whomever, and, yet, making it all sound so current, fresh, original, and just about damn perfect, Walker is the epitome of a bluesman. A great, and I mean great, acoustic guitar player; a superb, emotional singer of unquestionable depth and fortitude; and a hilarious yet righteous performer who demands attention, all of his collective greatness can be found in "Lost & Found," a recently released collection of some of his best performances at a

BAR FLY JOURNALS

By Stephanie Shawn

Hello my Sweet Bar-Flies!!!!...Another Fabulous Month for yours truly, and I hope you had the same! Does anyone know how to stop my keyboard from inserting everywhere? I'm typing away and I look up and it's skipped back and is sticking letters in where they don't belong. It's honestly driving me batshit... please help!

Anyways, I had a Fabulous Party at my house this month...so sorry if you weren't there.. We had the pool vacced to crystalline perfection and the hot tub had it's new sprinklin' of Spazazz (yup, Spazazz). We had Cornholio (some freakin' board game with beanbags that I had to fight tooth and nail for), a fire pit and lots and lots of good food and drinks. John Gavitt arrived with his awesome two-stroke gas powered blender and the party began!! A lot of friends and family came and then Jimmy was naked in the hot tub and it wasn't even dark yet!! Bev Gray, my favoritist new Karaoke Girl came and did an absolutely fabulous job coming up with every single song title that we threw at her in a heartbeat and letting me sing to my hearts content (why? cuz I paid her...that's why!)

My fab friend Stacy belted out almost every song with me, along with some classics by Chris Cip, Artie and Donny G...even Pam, Bonnie and Steve sang a couple tunes... It was a blast for me and I want to thank everyone who came and helped with the party! I'd also like to thank my neighbors for putting up with the screeching and our bad parking jobs...love ya!

My sister Bets and I took our daughters to New York this past weekend. Yup, it was Girl's Nite in NYC and we had a crazy time! I have to tell you that I've had a nasty cold for the last couple of weeks and can not seem to kick it. We were leaving for New York on a Saturday morning and I woke up with laryngitis...which my husband always thoroughly enjoys, but since I was leaving town he felt it was such a waste. Anyways, the girls and I all arrive in NYC and went down to the Seaport to see Bodies the Exhibition. For those of you who have not seen or heard of this, they apparently took a bunch of Chinese Prisoners and preserved them in some polymers, then cut them up into different pieces so we can examine our bodies close up. Very Cool!

Next we had a fantastic dinner in SoHo and then off to the comedy clubs! We went to GOTHAM CITY and then to DANGERFIELDS, an old favorite of ours. We stopped to get our own bottle and into DANGERFIELDS we went. The first two comics were hysterical and we actually had

BOZ SCAGGS EMBRACES MUSIC'S MYSTERY, DIVERSITY

By Rex Rutkoski

Music has been a constant and a really important force, he emphasizes. "I relate just about everything I experience in my life to music in one way or another," Scaggs explains.

For decades fans have been the beneficiaries of that passion. At 65, he is eager to continue to share it. "I feel like I'm in a pretty good spot. I'm lucky to still be doing very much what I want to do and looking forward to a good stretch of a tour, longer than I have had for a while," he says.

There seems to be some very interesting activities on the horizon for him, he says. "There's a new (still to be released) album that I have no idea what's gonna happen with. I'm very pleased and proud of it, and it might find its way into some hearts and minds," he says. It is comprised primarily of standards "done in a little progressive Gil Evans mode," he says.

In a 2001 interview, Scaggs, then 57, said he felt "things count more than they ever have." "Perhaps it's a sense of age. Perhaps it is the time of my life. Everything counts with me now," he explained then. "Turning 50 now is a benchmark. After 50 everything counts."

Now, at 65, he has not changed his opinion. "That's very much my feeling," he says.

As to what extent age is a motivator to get to the projects he may always have promised himself he would one day, he notes, "There is always some unfinished business we carry around, and I'm sure there is some part of that (the ticking chronological clock). On the other hand, we perhaps let ourselves fall into place more."

He says he does not really have a "To Do" list to check off, though he would like to have some music in a film, and he also has "sort of a rhythm and blues jazzy album" he wants to finish, as well as "kind of an R&B blues rockabilly record in me that has to get out."

"I find myself engaged in something and let it consume me. Whatever it is is what I'm doing," he says. "I don't worry about time passing. I just do what I do in front of me."

That's probably different than in other times of his life, he says. He seems uncertain if there is any less pressure now for him, then acknowledges, "There probably is less, but I'm still under the impression that I've got to get things done."

Scaggs sees himself as happier now than he has ever been in his life. "But my knees hurt more," he adds through laughter.

Fortunately it is his voice, not his knees, that he needs most and it is quite healthy. "My voice is my primary instrument," he says. "What I am trying to express comes through my voice."

Each project with those pipes is a learning experience, he adds. "I learn ways of putting chords together and of using my voice in new ways," he says.

He keeps what he does fresh for himself by tending to follow his instincts and interests. He found the album he just finished, for example, extremely challenging. "Singing in this mode with this jazz quartet really forces me to get into a range of my vocals and harmonic challenges I haven't had before," he explains. "It definitely makes me better at what I do as a singer and musician. It's done purely for the sake of the songs and the music. It makes me feel brand new challenging myself. It makes me remember what it was like when I was starting out as a musician as a kid. It's a very good feeling."

He always looks for a song that is a comfortable melodic fit. "And I look for the emotion in the songs and hope that the lyrics match the emotion of the music. If a song keeps me going around and around in my head, I know it's something I can possess at some time or another," he explains. "If I can actually make my voice do what I want to do, then I've got a home run. That's the way I measure it. It's not that often that all the things click."

He assures it has not been difficult to hold to his philosophy to only explore the music that means something to him. "There are no commercial pressures that would interfere with me just trying to find a song that means something to me," he says.

Scaggs says he has been touched deeply and emotionally by a lot of vocalists and a lot of instrumentalists. "That's what means the most of me. I've never experienced anything like seeing Ray Charles live when I was 25 years old. That galvanized, rewired me. Something touched me deeply," he recalls.

If he ever struck a note that touched anyone as deeply as he has been affected by Charles, he says that would be his crowning achievement. "That means everything. I'm serving music, this thing that I love. I want to give the joy and pleasure that has been given to me to someone else."

His body of work is proof that he has.

The Texas native was raised on rhythm and blues, soul music, early rock'n'roll and raw Delta and Chicago blues. In high school he played in a band with classmate Steve Miller, then went to London in 1965 and performed across Europe. In 1967, he returned to America, joining the Steve Miller Blues Band as the Bay Area music scene was making its artistic mark on the world. After two albums with Miller, he made his U.S. solo debut for Atlantic Records with "Boz Scaggs," an album cut with the famed Mus-sel Shoals rhythm section and featuring young guitarist Duane Allman on a blazing 13-minute blues workout in "Loan Me A Dime."

He moved to Columbia Records in 1971, where, over several albums, he explored his love for rhythm and blues. Scaggs says it is difficult to describe the powerful draw that R&B has been for him, other than "it's the rhythms and resonances that come out of the black American experience we got to hear."

It's universal, it's very deep and it's music that touches us all emotionally in a way, he adds. "And it's what I got to grow up hearing in Texas and radio around me," he says.

His 1974 CD, "Slow Dancer," is described as his most explicit bow to soul music. It was followed two years later by his commercial and artistic breakthrough, "Silk Degrees," which produced the hit singles "Lowdown" and "Lido Shuffle."

"There is an album I did in 2000 called 'Dig' that has some of the most satisfying moments of music I've ever recorded," he adds.

When he looks back on his career so far, Scaggs says he thinks of some of the ensembles he has put together through the years, and the musicians with whom he has recorded and toured, such as those on "Silk Degrees." "They were an inspiration to me," he recalls.

The artist always has prided himself in working with the best players available. "That's a really key component," he adds.

Scaggs recognizes that some people might be surprised to find him on an occasional jazz festival bill. "They could very well be. I'm better known in other areas. I don't pretend to be a jazz musician. That's very sacred musical ground to me," he says. "That said, I think the wonderful thing about the age we live in, in terms of music that is around, is that we musicians have found commonality with our musical brothers and sisters in all walks of music, what we call world music."

One genre of commonality is American blues and rhythm and blues, he says. "The progressive form of that is jazz. And jazz is finding commonality with hip-hop. We are all part of a bigger musical universe. That is just a fantastic time now," he says. "I remember what a sort of precious thing it was when I first heard James Brown. I guess I was 17. There weren't a lot of kids getting to that."

That's all changed, he says. "Now these complex rhythms and harmonics, kids are getting to this stuff at an early age, all sorts of music. Our whole lives are just infused with so much music. It's great."

myriad of locales over the years.

And, that may be the reason that this collection is so remarkable. Just about anything works close to perfection in Walker's hands, but the fact that these songs were never recorded for a specific commercial release at the time of their performances lends an authenticity, relaxation and a genuineness that, while typifying all of Walker's work, makes all the parts of "Lost & Found" truly a greater sum than the whole.

And what parts they are. Several of the songs, including the absolute picker's delight, "Toby's Boogie Woogie;" the hysterically metaphorical "Baseball Blues," and the right out of the ditch "Sadie Green" show the magnificent breadth and depth of Walker's playing and, perhaps more crucially, his understanding of these blues. And, while Walker's original compositions are gems in themselves, he, much like the author Gioia, reaches back through the history of this incredible music for some breathtaking nuggets, covering Charlie Patton's "Bird Nest Bound," Booker T. Washington's "Jitterbug Swing," Willie Dixon's "Spoonful," and Big Bill Broonzy's "I Want My Hands On It."

If you're a blues fan, and you've, well, got the blues about the continued popularity, or lack thereof, of this music, check out Toby Walker, and he'll take your blues away, by playing them better than just about anyone out there today.

"Lost and Found" may be purchased from Toby Walker's web site, littletobywalker.com.

tears rolling down our faces, but then it got UGLY...we may have started heckling the comics...we may have had to make a run for it before the crowd (or comics) turned against us...we may have flagged down a cab (which was not supposed to take five of us at once, but did out of fear for his own life)...we may have dragged each other down the hallway of our hotel after one of us played "dead legs" ...or maybe none of that happened? If I told you the truth of what really happened that night...I would have to kill you.

So on to other happenings around our lovely town. Unfortunately I was not able to make the Harley_Davidson Raffle at the WESTERLY ELKS as I was partying like a Rock Star in NYC...but I heard through the grapevine that it was a fantastic time with SKINNY MULLIGAN doing a rockin' good job as the Band of the Day!! They are also going to be playing at the GILLIGANS ISLAND on October 3 so stop by and check them out. I want to congratulate Jimmy Lucy and his wife for winning the Grand Prize...a brand new Harley-Davidson Motorcycle....good times for a good cause!

And also this month surprise, surprise. Bruce and Neil took a day and one for the team and hit up some local bars to check out the Cheap Beer in the Area...area...area. And the winners are..GILLIGANS ISLAND in White Rock in Westerly..always fun and along with cheap beer they offer a delicious full menu and entertainment on many nights. They also hit up the NIANTIC PUB in Bradford. I guess men will do just about anything for a beer, but they had a good time there! Then it was off to the TAP ROOM at the KNICK. Good food and cheap beer all around. Thank you Bruce for your expose (insert your own accent mark) on Cheap Beer in the Area....area...area.

O.K. I changed my mind again...big surprise (it's a girl thing, remember) anyway, we had one last Poker Run for the season.. Why? because the weather was beautiful, that's why. We had all the usual suspects show up to the HANDLEBAR CAFE, Rosey Posey, Heather with friend Alex, Lee and Teri, Danny, Pamtastic, Barbetie and Dave, John G, the Baaafatha, Andre and Cheryl...plus some new faces showed up along the way... John and Jimmy, Bob with Billy and my new friend Heather, who hopped in my car at our first stop LEGENDS in Hope Valley and left her husband with Pamtastic.

We then stopped at LUCKY HOUSE on Rte 3 in Ashaway cuz we were hungry and Captain Keith didn't think SANDY'S LIGHTHOUSE would be open. I love my new best friend Heather, but I know she woke up in the morning with that panicky feeling you get when you know you've done a bad, bad thing...I think we all know that feeling, don't we? Well Heather was with Andre, Cheryl and myself in the '38 Ford that I drive and she kept telling me..."I really, really like you...no really...no matter what anyone says about you I think you are soooo nice....cuz my friend hates you...really hates you..I mean she really hates you"...Heather I love you...you were hysterical and I had a really good time with you ..and as for your friend.....

Anyways, last stop was CLYDESDALES with Miss Rosey...always a fun time and apparently it was also pitch league that night so we ran into Artie, a faithful pitch player from way back. We had a quick drink there then headed back to the HANDLEBAR CAFE for our final card. The winner was one of our new guys Little Rock or Ronnie...he did a fabulous job of keeping up with us that night and with his dad! We had a great time and I was so happy to see my first boyfriend when I got back... DJ Neil Roma. He looked as great as he always does and it's nice to reminisce about old times. Hi Neil!

I would also like to say Happy Birthday to my mother Dawn...we took our own road trip to Waterford last month to watch a fantastic taping of DEAL OR NO DEAL. We went with Bruce who was also celebrating a birthday and my sister Bets.. My son Michael and Betsy's son Dean work on the show and it was alot of fun watching the show being taped and seeing Howie Mandel in action and screaming NO DEAL at the top of our lungs! Also Happy Birthday to Dave Turano's wife, Linda. Soul Shot with Ernie Smith played at the Knickerbocker and I heard they did a fantastic job as the always do.

Well it is my Anniversary this month and we are heading to Vegas again...hopefully I will have a few good BarFly Stories for you. I am waiting patiently for some BarFly Stories from you, though...so start writing.... barfly2u2@yahoo.com ...I'm waiting, so ciao for now, my sweet Flies.
