MUSIC NOTES

"The Other Fab Four"

By Mark T. Gould

We all know about John, Paul, George and Ringo. Today, as another yet another celebrity death brings another era wistfully to its end, it seems appropriate to talk about another Fab Four.

That would be Ben, Adam, Hoss and Little Joe.

The passing last month of the incredibly underrated actor Pernell Roberts, the last surviving member of the cast of the long-running western "Bonanza," triggers more fond memories of television viewing, and the indelible characters from those seminal shows in the Sixties.

Roberts, as just about everyone my age knows, played Adam Cartwright, the eldest of the three brothers, who also included the lovable Hoss (played by Dan Blocker) and the loved Little Joe (played by Michael Landon), to the widowed, yet always courageous and benevolent, land baron Ben Cartwright (played by Lorne Greene).

In many ways, for people of my generation, "Bonanza" was the special part of Sunday night television viewing. In those days, we only had the Big Three networks, NBC (which ran the show), CBS and ABC. That night was chocked full of televised entertainment, starting with the wondrous animal life depicted in "Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom," starring Marlin Perkins; the magic and imagination of "The Wonderful World of Disney," and the variety of "The Ed Sullivan Show," the last of which, you may recall, first exposed America to that other Fab Four, the Beatles.

What made "Bonanza" special for kids like me? A lot of things, but mostly the time it was on. In those days, like today, prime time shows started at 7 p.m. Eastern time on Sundays, as opposed to 8 p.m. the rest of the week, because then, as now, Sunday night was seen as "family night" for television. Because all the hugely popular shows mentioned above, other than "Bonanza" came on earlier in the evening, the western didn't start until 9 p.m., the "outer limits" (pun intended) of school night viewing for kids like me.

But, if we'd all been good that day, most of our parents (read mothers) let us stay up and watch the travails of the Cartwright family, usually with our fathers, thereby creating a special bonding time.

And bond we did, for a very long time. Bonanza ran on NBC from September 12, 1959 to January 16, 1973, a period of 14 seasons, making it the second longest running western series, behind the likewise immortal Gunsmoke in television history. Thanks to the cable boom, not to mention the aging of the baby boom, the show has been running for far longer than that in syndication.

"Bonanza's" basic premise was pretty simple, but quite unorthodox, for its time. The show chronicled the weekly adventures of the Cartwright family, headed by the thrice-widowed patriarch Ben, who had the three sons, each by a different wife (quite the coup in those simpler times, and not often mentioned in the story lines). Roberts' character, Adam, the eldest, was the urbane architect who designed and built the family ranch house. The middle son was the warm and lovable Hoss, real name Eric (one of the earliest and most obscure answers to television trivia questions), and the youngest was the hotheaded and impetuous Joseph or "Little Joe." Longtime fans will remember the family's cook was the Chinese immigrant "Hop Sing," played by veteran character actor Victor Sen Yung. The family lived on a thousand-square mile ranch called the "Ponderosa," on the shores of Lake Tahoe, near Virginia City, in Nevada.

At its heart, "Bonanza" was considered an atypical western for its time, as the core of the storylines dealt with Ben and his three dissimilar sons, how they cared for one another, their neighbors and their land, rather than the typical, for the time, clichéd and hackneyed Western TV stories lines that usually tried to pass the cowboys killing the Indians as a story line or plot. The show's approach resonated with viewers, and it eventually reached number one by the mid-'60s. By 1970, it had become the first series to ever wind up in the Top Five for nine consecutive seasons (a record which would stand for decades) and thus established itself as the single biggest hit TV series of the 1960s. It remained high on the ratings until 1971, when it finally fell out of the top 10.

The show was moved to Tuesday nights in 1972, where, amid the ever changing times, it was trumped in the ratings by the sitcom "Maude." Earlier that year, Blocker had passed away. Greene died in 1987, and Landon, who became an even bigger star, if that was possible, with the sort-of spinoff "Little House on the Prairie," succumbed in 1991.

Yet, just like with the ongoing lives of Paul and Ringo, longtime fans of the show always felt its pulse so long as Roberts, who, ironically, was the first "son" to leave the series, was still alive. His death from cancer last month truly brings an end to an indelibly popular show that made its imprint on not just television, but American society.

I think I shall stay up past my bedtime for a few Sundays in its honor.

BAR FLY JOURNALS

By Stephanie Shawn

Hello My Sweet BarFlies.... another Fabulous Month for this Wandering Fly. We made it through one of the toughest months of the year and personally I am ready to start thinking Spring. I know, I know.. it's a little early, but hey..Really? you can't blame a girl for trying. The Cold, the Boredom, the Snow(yikes) I am ready for a little SunShine.

I made it to PRIMETIME CAFE this month and had one of the Best Meals I've tasted in quite awhile!! It was another WESTERLY-PAWCATUCK CHAMBER EVENT and I was bonding with some Faabuuulouss People. I was seated with my New Best Friends, Heidi and Andy Schilke from SCHILKE INSURANCE in Westerly. We had a spectacular Apple Martini that had me skipping happily throughout the Restaurant! We celebrated the Holidays a little late with my third (count 'em ..3) Yankee Gift Swap. From Zero to Hero I am this year, with the Gifting. The Gift Swap Emcee, Danny, must also be commended for his Bob Barkeresque showmanship! Kudos on a Job Well Done!!

Anyways, A Fantastic Meal was served by the wonderful Staff at PRIMETIME. They started with a Spring Mix Salad with pears, if my memory serves me correctly (but let's not count on that so much), followed by a "melt in your mouth" Bernaise covered Filet Mignon that was seriously..To Die For!!! It was served with mashed taters and extra long green beans. Absolutely Fabulous! I really can't say it enough. Desert was brought in by the guests and included a giant chocolate cake and a carrot cake that many people salivated over. The place was warm and cozy and everyone there was Merrily Celebrating the end of another Fantastic Year and the Toasting of New Beginnings!

I've got to tell you....my beautiful great-niece Sweet Luna is in the WESTERLY SUN CUTEST BABY CONTEST..and she is looking Super! I'm quietly haranguing all my friends (ya right?? quietly my ass) to .. Vote For Luna...page 4 # 46. Got it...a small cash payment and drinks on Bets if she wins. (huh, did I say that?). Seriously though, check her out on-line..she is definitely freakin' adorable

Several complaints coming in from various BarFly Maggots...Jeans are apparently shrinking Everywhere... At an alarming rate. But wait...talking to Katie careb the other day....she reminded of the days when she and my sister, Bets used to sew their jeans tightly to their calves... so maybe that 's what the hell is going on...someone is sewing our clothing snugly to our bodies..no longer able to conceal the muffintop...blazers are now in...crop jackets have sh*t the bed. And my New Year's Commitment to join the gym? Not happening.....food is my friend... couch is coming in a close second...seriously...I LOVE my Couch...As the days get longer perhaps I will soon emerge from my chrysalis to brush my teeth, shower, do my hair and exchange my sweats for my Rock Star Clothes. It's gonna happen soon people..trust me.

This just in...Unnamed source...yet to be confirmed Alex (from Heather and Alex) won the Regional Karaoke Contest at ALLEY KATZ Along with the bartender from the Elks..if he wins he goes to Vegas, baby! Good Luck from the BarFly!!!

Now to an event of momentous proportions.... ROAD TRIP!! Anyone who is Anyone will be partying with me and my Crew in Daytona the first week of March... Rocky, Rose, Shaun, Ronnie, Ed, Heather, Spike, Katrina, Jimmy and many more..It's a Non- Stop BarFly Fest with all kinds of Naked Debauchery...Can't wait!! My white t-shirt is ready for the ice bucket...It will be a blast and I will have plenty of stories and pix (Ricky has a new camera). If you need a room or any info contact me and I will let you know where the best rooms are for the best rates!

This month I will be taking a shorter Road Trip to New London to visit Dave Christina at FRANKS where he will be DJing. I wanna dance!! I hope it's still a Gay Club cuz seriously, I am looking for a new Gay Best Friend. Love 'Em. It is also the HYGENIC ART FEST and that is always an unusual mix of people and artwork. Stop by next Saturday and have a drink with me and Dave. I am also looking forward to Mid-March when to fantastic bands, SPACEWHALE and CHRIS MCKAY and the TONE TWISTERS will be playing at BANK STREET CAFE. Look for more info next month and like the show DIRTY JOBS I can't do this without you! Send me any info, stories, pix, events, gossip...anything people to barfly2u2@yahoo.com and I will try to get your story in!

And finally.. my family suffered a terrible loss with the death of my Sweet Uncle Randy. We will miss him dearly. With the sad though a little happiness does fall...I want to wish Miss Michele Mitch a Happy Birthday along with Candice, Tina and Barbara, Mike Vargas and Wendy and Chris Cipriano. Also a hello to Chico and Justin and Dean...new customers of mine! Dave Turano celebrated another birthday at the KNICKERBOCKER CAFE in Westerly with the band SOULSHOT and I heard it was filled with wonderful people celebrating along with Dave. Also heard Tom OBrien and Davey Dread will be playing Acoustic Night at UPRIVER on some Fridays. So stop in and check them out!

Also Congratulations to friends Carlton and Beth on their Engagement. I bought a Fabulous New Dress for the Wedding which you will read all about in Our BarFly Journals. I'd also like to say "hello and yes, I did listen to Ray LaMontagne" to friend and avid BarFly Journals Reader Steven Slosberg. Love LaMontagne and even checked for upcoming tour dates but unfortunately, at this time, he seems to be also laying low. Honestly though,

HEARING AID

BEST IN BLUES 2009

A Sound Waves Magazine tradition continues with our picks for the best new blues records of the past year. Joining me as he has in the past is Dana Fargnoli. As many of you already know, Dana is the host of the "Out of the Blues" radio show which airs on WCNI 90.9 FM every Saturday morning at 9:00 AM. This was a strong year for blues music and it was difficult to whittle my list down to ten. I know Dana felt the same way. Also, you can be certain that Dana will be playing tracks from all of these selections throughout the month of January. So without further ado here are our picks.

Bill's list:

1. Robert Cray "This Time" Vanguard Records
2. Eddie Taylor Jr. "Worried About My Baby" Wolf Records
3. Tinsley Ellis "Speak No Evil" Alligator Records
4. Johnny Rawls "Ace of Spades" Catfood Records
5. Eddie C. Campbell "Tear This World Up" Delmark Records
6. Ronnie Earl "Living in the Light" Stony Plain Records
7. Sonny Rhodes "I'm Back Again" Feelin' Good Records
8. Corey Harris "blu.black" Telarc Records
9. Joe Louis Walker "Between a Rock and the Blues" Stony Plain Records
10. Tamara & Lucky Peterson "Darling Forever" JSP Records
Blues artist of the decade
Chris Thomas King

Dana's list:

1. Louisiana Red "Back to the Black Bayou" Ruf Records
2. Zora Young "The French Connection" Delmark Records
3. Duke Robillard "Stomp! The Blues

www.Swaves.com

- Tonight" Stony Plains Records
4. Compilation - "Chicago Blues: A Living History" Raisin Records
 5. Nick Moss & the Flip Tops "Live at Chan's, Vol 2" Blue Bella Records
 6. Ray Bailey "Resurrection" Tondef Records
 7. Joe Louis Walker "Between a Rock and the Blues" Stony Plain Records
 8. Eugene "Hideaway" Bridges "Live in San Antonio" Armadillo Records
 9. Tas Cru "Grizzle & Bone" Crustee Tees Records
 10. Eddie C. Campbell "Tear This World Up" Delmark Records
Blues artist of the decade
B.B. King

Dana and I would like to dedicate this year's top ten lists to the memory of Koko Taylor and Les Paul. I would also like to wish all Sound Waves readers a very happy new year!

DAVID SANBORN "Only Everything" Decca Records

The great saxophone players possess the ability to transform a listener's mood; from dark to light, black to white, up-tempo to laid back and relaxed. Just one listen to David Sanborn's alto saxophone will confirm that very talent. "Only Everything" is Sanborn's 25th studio effort in a long and prosperous musical career and follows 2008's "Here and Gone" as the second tribute to the works of the legendary Ray Charles, which Sanborn and his sax play a much deserved homage to. The music has never sounded better.

Joining Sanborn on "Only Everything" (produced by Phil Ramone and titled as a response by Sanborn when asked what the music of Ray Charles meant to him) are Joey DeFrancesco on the Hammond B3 organ and Steve Gadd on drums. Bob Malach (tenor sax), Frank Basile (baritone sax), Tony Kadleck (trumpet), and Mike Davis (bass trombone) also lend their musical expertise on 5 of the 8 tracks. Their contributions give "Only Everything" a rich, big band feel. Sanborn delves into jazz, rhythm and blues, rock, and soul renderings with creativity and improvisations that define his signature sound. Hank Crawford's "The Peeper" opens the disc which melodic runs delivered by the versatile brass section. "Only Everything (for Genevieve)" follows, bringing a more stripped down, classic blues and jazz sound. There are also two guest vocal appearances on "Only Everything", as Joss Stone lends a hand on the standard "Let The Good Times Roll" with a natural maturity well beyond her 22 years, and James Taylor's soulful voice provides the perfect ingredient to the Ray Charles classic "Hallelujah, I Love Her So." Both guests add the perfect amount of authenticity to Sanborn's musical tribute.

On "Only Everything", we get the opportunity to hear David Sanborn return to the sources of his first musical inspirations. Listeners will also gain an appreciation for the music contributions of the late Ray Charles delivered by one of the best musicians in the business. The formula works to perfection.

ALICIA KEYS

"Freedom is the ability to change"

By Talia Soghomonian / The Interview People

On October 21st of last year, Alicia Keys held "The Element of Freedom Lecture & Performance Series" at New York University's Skirball Center. During the event, she gave NYU students -- most of which were aspiring songwriters -- solid advice and discussed her songwriting process, before wowing the crowd with an exclusive showcase. Since then she has released her newest album The Element of Freedom. We caught up with the inspired Miss Keys in the East Village.

There is a lot more pop, 80s-inspired elements on this album, like Prince...

Alicia Keys: Ooh, I love that! I love him very much. It's so funny to hear different people say what the songs remind them of. It's really funny, cos some people say, "It sounds like Michael Jackson! It sounds like Fleetwood Mac! It sounds like Madonna!" I'm like, Madonna?!

Maybe her first album.

Alicia Keys: Really? That's cool! Before I do an album, I never sit down and contemplate what it's going to sound like. It just begins to create itself, so it's really interesting to see what happens. I did want to try new sounds and I did get a chance on my last album, As I Am, to start to explore different keyboards and synthesizers and things. But on this album I really went farther into it. It was really fun. I definitely went into this album knowing I wanted to try new things and just try new styles. I like it when things become different than maybe what people are used to hearing from me. I would really like to do that every time since I'm different every time. First I thought that this album would be very broken down, very strict. I still want to do a record like that. That would be fun.

By strict you mean pure, unplugged?

Alicia Keys: Yeah, just all about the music and all about vocals and instrument, with a very minimal amount of instruments. Who knows what'll happen next?

At the NYU lecture, you said that you felt lonely during the last album, that you finally have found the key and balance with this album. What happened on the last one?

Alicia Keys: A lot of things were different on the last record, but the thing that I learned the most between the last record and the last tour was that working is great and I love my job. I love to perform, to play, to write, to sing. I love the effect that it has on people and when people come to me and tell me that certain things have changed in life or that I've gotten them through certain times in their life, there's no greater reward for me. At the same time, there's also a balance between working and life. And so I learned that it's very possible to do both. You don't have to choose career over life; you don't have to don't choose life over career. You can do them both. That's why the world is set up where you work from Monday to Friday and you have the weekends off, because everyone needs some time to have with their family or the people they love. So I just thought about putting things like that into my world, like I'll work this day and this day and these days will be my off days. So that's the first time in all these years that I really realized that that's easily done. It's a great way to create a better balance in my life and happiness in my life, more calm in my life and not get so worked up because I feel overworked! In fact, because I did that, the album got created way faster than I ever thought because I balanced it out. So it's just about learning what's good for me and putting it into the next album. So that's how I found a new way to be creative.

Last time we met, you said you were trying not to spread yourself too thin.

Alicia Keys: See? So I'm staying good. I'm staying consistent!

Your lyrics are also very personal. Some of the songs talk about loneliness, lost love and longing. Did you tap into your own personal life and feelings?

Alicia Keys: Yeah. All the songs have emotions and feelings that I've been through, that I'm going through or that I was going through. But it's all open to interpretation, I find, because when I listen to the songs I know what I was thinking or what I was feeling. And sometimes when other people are listening to them they get a whole other story from it. So hopefully it just resonates with whatever the listener is going through. But the songs are actually very diverse. "This Bed" says "I don't want to go through life wishing we could do it right." So if a relationship is on the verge of falling apart, it's me saying that "I'm realizing that this bed is too lonely without you. I don't want to hold my pillow; I wanna hold you." That's not really about loneliness but realization. "Love Is Blind" -- people will think it's a break-up song, but it's not a break-up song. It's really about the fact that when you love someone, you love him very strongly. When you really love someone, no matter who he is -- it could be your children, the person you love, your family -- there's no detering you from that love. No matter what anyone says, you know how you feel. Love is very blind, you know, so that's just a fearless statement. But I love hearing people's different perspectives about my songs. It's kind of fun, like "wow, what did they take from it?"

What is freedom for you?

Alicia Keys: Freedom for me is to be able to be myself and being able to express myself as I grow and change cos I'm never going to just be the same. Freedom is the ability to change, to grow and to not be held back because of it. So that's freedom for me.

Did you feel the lack of it at any time during the past few years?

Alicia Keys: Musically, I have to say I feel pretty free to express myself, and I'm fortunate to say I always have. But in life there's always some type of way that someone is saying that you should only do this, you shouldn't do that or that's not a good idea, that will never work... We all get that. Someone is always going to tell you what they think you should or shouldn't do. But freedom is the ability to choose what you want.

You were also saying at NYU that you got rid of people who didn't have your best interest in mind. How did they hamper you?

Alicia Keys: They hampered me in a way... It was just heavy, like weighted, like carrying extra weight. Some of those people that I was doing business with and the only reason that I found out was because fortunately I have other good people that I work with who said, "You know what? Strange thing came up that I heard from someone. What do you think about that?" And it was something I hadn't even heard. I realized that I was working with some people that were just... People have their own motives and everyone's intentions aren't always the greatest. So I'm fortunate that I had people to watch for me when I couldn't see and show me so I could change that. I don't know if it felt heavy at the time – because at the time everything felt OK – but the heavy part was actually changing it, fixing it and correcting it. That's the hard part.

Well you started out really young and people take advantage of that. You're not even 30 and you've achieved so much!

Alicia Keys: I feel very proud of everything that I've achieved so far and I definitely feel excited about all the things I want to still achieve. I just try to take it day by day.

How do you see yourself at age 40?

Alicia Keys: I see myself very much in control. I see myself be the head of my businesses as I've always been. I see myself diversify a little bit more. Maybe I'll be more into songwriting and producing as opposed to doing the artist thing. But I also see myself in other things. I see myself producing films, scores and creating music for films. I see myself starting my own businesses that are outside of music, which I am in the process of doing now, just to continue to grow and have a real positive effect on the world.

What kind of businesses are you setting up?

Alicia Keys: Many. One that I'm starting now is a jewelry line. It's called The Barber's Daughter. What I love about it is that it's all hand done and they have these beautiful inscriptions on them. When you read them, they move you and you feel proud to wear it cos it reminds you of something that you want to remember. And I love words so much. I feel like we're all searching for something and I want to introduce people to the things that want to help them on their search in a positive way. So that's one first step. But I want to do a lot of things. I want to be the female Magic Johnson! I want to be like Oprah and I want to build schools. I want to continue to introduce people to positive things. But I'm still starting!

And you can be Linda Perry.

Alicia Keys: And I can be Linda Perry as well! Linda Perry, Oprah Winfrey, Magic Johnson, Quincy Jones!

You seem to like strong personalities and did a duet on Jay-Z's album. Is there anyone else you'd like to work with?

Alicia Keys: Oh, so many people... Prince is on top of my list. I'd like to do something with Gwen Stefani, M.I.A. and Lady Gaga would be interesting. They all have personality, you know?
