MUSIC NOTES

“Bad Scooter Finds His Groove”

By Mark T. Gould

Imagine the pressure.

Three years removed from arguably the pinnacle of commercial success. A monumental, presumably once-in-a-lifetime album; gracing the cover of two prominent national magazines in the same week; performing three and half hour, breathtaking, tour de force concerts that are still being talked about over three decades later.

Yet, there had been those three years without a follow-up, with nary a foot set in a recording studio, all that, yes, “promise,” tied up in seemingly endless litigation with a manager, preventing him from proving that, through all that hype, he was not a fluke, that he was real, he was inspiring, and that he would continue to make a statement.

Finally, legal wrangling behind him, he entered the studio. Now, he could have chosen the easy road, an identical follow-up. Obviously, he had the built-in audience, and another high-test, high-performance, optimistic, upbeat record would do the trick. It would be so easy.....

Yes, it probably would have been easy, but if you thought that’s how it would go, well, maybe then you didn’t, and don’t, know the artist and the man that Bruce Springsteen became in those three years of exile.

The choices that Springsteen made, and the gems that he rejected to solidify his singular, personal vision, resulted in the stark, dark and deep “Darkness On The Edge of Town,” released in 1978.

“Born to Run,” filled with its epic grandeur, it was not, and it seems that Springsteen, by his choices, insisted that be so, or, not so, as the case may be. Yet, the new record was no less significant, and it was, looking back over the years, clearly the next, logical step in his characters’ development after their search for a better life was first chronicled on “Born to Run.”

The musical decisions that he made, and the comparatively simpler, easier choices that he rejected, are now on display in the box set release “The Promise: The Darkness On the Edge of Town Story,” released late last year. The project, totaling three CDs and three DVDs, includes, in the ironies of ironies, a remastered version of the original record that brightens what was undoubtedly an intentionally dull, buried mix of music that arguably needed to be presented that way for Springsteen’s vision to be complete, as well as 21 outtakes from the sessions, spread across two discs.

The latter tracks, essentially a double disc of new Springsteen music for his fans, are ethereal, uplifting and positive, all attributes that would not describe the songs contained on the original “Darkness.”

The “Born to Run” characters had, well, run, and Springsteen made sure, with each song on “Darkness,” that his listeners knew what those characters faced when they ended their journeys and settled down, and in, to face life.

Two of the most popular songs from the original “Darkness,” “Badlands,” and “The Promised Land,” were anthemic cries to overcome bad times and circumstances; while two others, just as popular, “Racing in the Streets” and the album-coda title track, are grim reminders that times and circumstances can crush people’s hope.

Bleak would be one way to describe the original premise; dark would certainly be another. Either way, Springsteen certainly did not take the easy way out, probably because he knew, deep down, that his characters, and their lives, would never have it easy, and he owed it to them to tell their stories. If you watch the DVD documentary about the making of the original “Darkness,” you can vividly sense Springsteen’s determination, drive and resulting choices.

And, nowhere are his decisions more evident than when listening to “The Promise,” chock full of maybe not happier, but certainly more positive songs, many of which, to my ears, owe more to the sound of “Born to Run” than to what Springsteen would ultimately release on “Darkness.”

Truth be told, I’ve never had to live the life of broken dreams and ambitions that torment Springsteen’s characters. Yet, I’ve seen it enough, understand it enough, and, yes, respect it enough, to be constantly moved and personally touched by his descriptions of it in his music, as are most, if not all, of his fans.

And, “Darkness” certainly wasn’t the last time Springsteen made that kind of decision. Four years later, he followed his most commercially accessible and positive album, “The River,” with the stark terror of “Nebraska,” and repeated it a few years later when he followed the best-selling record of his career, “Born in the USA,” with the relationship-buster “Tunnel of Love.”

There are very, very few artists out there who would have the confidence, the guts, and yes, the balls, to make “Darkness” the way Springsteen did.

“More than rich, more than famous, more than happy – I wanted to be great,” Springsteen reported said about the decisions that led to the original “Darkness.”

“The Promise,” indeed.

BAR FLY JOURNALS

By Stephanie Shawn

Hello, My Sweet Bar Flies....WOW!...What a way to End the Year! I was shoveling for days along with getting "the cold that never ends"! Stir-crazy as all hell, so any events that were planned were a welcome respite from laying on my couch! I Love a Party!

But wait...Vegas baby! I somehow forgot to tell you about my fabulous trip to Las Vegas for Halloween! We went with Lina, Ronnie and Shaun and had alot of fun. Not mentioning any names, but one of us may have had a leetle toooo much to drink on the way out (yes 6a.m.) and we may have been in fear of an emergency landing with a TSA escort off the plane, and we may have spent too much gambling and shopping, but Halloween is fantastic in Vegas(picture lotsa skin and stilts etc.) Ricky and Lina judged the costumes heading into the RIO LOUNGE (Avatar Won!) and we ended up with a great trip.

Lina and Ronnie were also lucky enough to catch CHER and said the show was Absolutely Unbelievable! I was dining one hundred and eight floors up in the STRATOSPHERE'S TOP OF THE WORLD RESTAURANT with Dick, Ann, Karen and Buster. The beautiful has spectacular views of the Strip with the police helicopters flying by the windows in the seedier sections of town. Can't get much better than that, people!

Stopped by the HILLTOP CAFE in Westerly this month to visit Billy the WingSlinger, who was taking care of the Bar while the staff were treated to a limo trip (Tony, as their driver) to delectable TONY D'S in New London for an employee Xmas Party! Wow, missed my invite. Anyways, once we got Billy some register tape, he held down the fort quite well, selling hundreds of wings and many, many delicious pizzas and doing it Fabulously! Nice job!

Speaking of Xmas Parties...the HANDLEBAR CAFE PARTY went wonderfully. I was in my favoritest Ms. Santa Suit and looking my bestest, I might add. Sharon and Kathleen were also in attendance, Sharon doubling as Bad Santa in her Black Outfit...but looking Good! Dave and Sue were there, the Yardney Gang (Jane, Marcia, Chris, Tony, Jan, Dan, Fran, Sue, Ed and Hot Vince). Stacie and Mike were also there with Pam and Brenda belting out the tunes with DJ DAVE CHRISTINA and Alecia and Jason!

Rocco and Lisa were also in attendance and Rocco helped out behind the Bar because we were SLAMMED!! Dave Pot-tie (editor-in-chief) along with the Baaafatha, Paula the Nip, Kris and Walt Slocum, Tami and Bruce also joined us that Night and Wendy Carr dropped off a Fabulous Gift Certificate to PRIMETIME CAFE for Betsy and Chris Cip as a Xmas Gift from Us Elves!

As we speak Pamtastic is on her SecretSpy way to visit Dave Turano at the opening of his SMALL AXE CAFE at the UMBRELLA FACTORY in Charlestown...serving food and beverage from 10-5 daily. Great Idea and I will be stopping by soon! SKIPPER'S DOCK celebrated Christmas in style with a rockin' party featuring SUNDAY GRAVY! Fantastic way to end the year.

Saw the DOUG WOODARD BAND at the 99 House in Westerly recently and I just loved them! A simple three piece band with a rock-n-rolly, bluesy, mountain musicky sound (to me). They played for a BUSINESS AFTER HOURS for the WESTERLY-PAWCATUCK CHAMBER OF COMMERCE and I really enjoyed them! Look for Doug Woodard on Facebook if you would like to book a show! I was also lucky enough to meet Nick Lamparelli from the 99House and he told me of the many offers happening now at the restaurant so try and plan out a get together in the coming year!

The boys from the HANDLEBAR CAFE held there annual pre-Christmas Road Trip to ROSIES and the GOLD CLUB in Groton. Artie told the Girl's he was getting married for a little "extra attention", but we are not getting many details from the guys so a little alcohol and possibly some truth serum may have to be administered to Mr. Weyant for some further details!

My beautiful friend Wendy Carr will be celebrating 40 years of Friends this month for her Birthday at the ANDREA HOTEL in Misquamicut! Wow! That's gonna be a Good One! And it just so happens, sweet Dino Cozzolino will be having his 50th at SANDY'S LIGHTHOUSE the Same Night! Happy Birthday, I Love You Both and I am ready for One Crazy Night!

Many Birthday Celebrations this month including the talented Miss SUE MENHART, Kris Slocum, Tina Eldridge, Matt Behan, Eddie St. Clair and my Step-mom Michele! Also, so many invites this month, my Party Meter is on over-load!! I will fill you in on all the salacious party details next month!

Well, I hope all your Christmas Wishes came true, I pray that this year will be better than last for those who need it most and I wish you the Best in keepin' those New Year's Resolutions! Visit me on Facebook (Bar Fly) to let me know all the up to the minute happenings in our little corner of the world or check us out on-line at swaves.com. Ciao for now, my Sweet Flies and Happy New Year!

MELISSA MANCHESTER

CONTINUES TO TAKE AUDIENCES ON A MUSICAL JOURNEY ON CONCERT AND THEATER STAGES AND IN FILMS

By Rex Rutkoski

Anyone looking for “evidence of joy” in life need look no further than music, suggests Grammy winner Melissa Manchester.

The veteran singer-songwriter-performer has crafted a most satisfying career finding and sharing that joy with audiences around the world.

“Music is breath, music is life, music is evidence of joy,” Manchester elaborates when asked to talk about what music means to her. She believes that it resonates for and touches others because, “I write from my heart and sing from my soul.” That, she adds, “is the only answer I can come up with.”

She says it is difficult for her to truly gauge what her contribution has been so far.

“I will say, however, that I am touched when someone mentions how a song of mine helped them in some way to clarify something or soothe them or give them strength during trying times,” Manchester acknowledged.

It all began for her in New York City, where her father was a bassoonist for the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra and her mother was one of the first women to design and found her own clothing firm, Ruth Manchester Ltd. They introduced their daughter to all of the classics. By 15, Melissa already was a published poet

After graduating from the High School of the Performing Arts, where she studied acting, she entered New York University and enrolled in a songwriting class taught by Paul Simon. She found his advice to, “Find your own, unique way of expressing yourself as all the stories have been told,” helpful.

Landing a staff writing job at Chappell Music, she began performing as a solo singer-pianist in Greenwich Village clubs, where she met Bette Midler and her music director Barry Manilow.

As a back-up singer for Midler’s early touring, she fulfilled her dream of playing Carnegie Hall.

She has good memories of those days. “Bette is a brilliant woman who took pleasure in weaving a spell and taking the audience on her journey,” she recalls.

Six months after touring with Midler, she landed her own recording contract, going on to headline both Carnegie and Radio City music halls, and performing for audiences across the country, fueled by her hit single, “Midnight Blue.”

She and Kenny Loggins co-wrote the radio classic “Whenever I Call You Friend.” Barbara Streisand, Dusty Springfield, Alison Kraus, Roberta Flack, Johnny Mathis, Kathy Mattea and Peabo Bryson, among many others, have recorded her songs.

Her international hits, “Through the Eyes of Love” and “Don’t Cry Out Loud,” were written for her by her friends and frequent collaborators Carole Bayer Sager, Marvin Hamlisch and the late Peter Allen.

Manchester was nominated for a Grammy in 1978 and received the Grammy Award in 1982 for best female vocalist. In 1980 she became the first artist in the history of the Academy Awards to have two nominated movie themes in the same year -- “Through the Eyes of Love” and “The Promise.” She made additional Oscar history by performing both songs during the worldwide telecast.

The artist says that as she has gotten older, she finds songs are more precious to her because she sees them as “small moments captured and shared.” “Sometimes they give a voice to those who think they’re alone. I hope people find strength and courage and comfort in my songs,” she explains.

Manchester offers a career-spanning review of those songs, as well as an introduction to new material -- “songs I’ve always wanted to sing” -- in her concerts.

She loves that it is different every night, seeing her performance as a shared experience with the audience. “I never know what people bring to the evening. I never know what story they might share with me afterwards,” she said.

“Magic moments” happen in concert when the music and the energy of the audience becomes one “and you’re all on the same journey for a few moments,” she said. “And then everyone goes back to their lives and all that’s left is the memory of that lived moment,” she added.

Her audience?

“They are people who have grown with me. We all started out at college age. Now we’ve traveled around many corners of life,” Manchester replied.

What she finds around her own personal corner these days continues to energize her.

“Life is very interesting lately and full of lovely adventures,” she said. She has a new song in Tyler Perry’s film, “For Colored Girls.” “It is a riveting and important film to see,” she said. “My song is ‘I Know Who I Am’ and it’s sung by the very talented Leona Lewis.”

Manchester also has a number of her songs in the upcoming (scheduled for March) film, “Dirty Girl.” “It’s a wonderful coming of age movie,” she said. “I’ve also written an original song for it called ‘Rainbird,’ which I perform. The wonderful writer/director Abe Sylvia took a pile of my songs and made them into a character themselves like a sort of weird Greek chorus, very inventive, very unexpected.”

Manchester believes her various interests help to make her a stronger overall

artist. "It all works well together. For example, working on a theater project makes my approach to concert singing richer, as I approach it more from an acting perspective," she explained.

She combined her acting and singing talents in starring roles in Andrew Lloyd Weber's "Song and Dance" and "Music of the Night," and early on in a recurring role in the hit television series Blossom. She also worked again with Bette Midler, co-starring in the film, "For the Boys."

In a first for her career, Manchester wrote the musical, "I Sent a Letter to My Love," based on the acclaimed Bernice Rubens novel of the same name. She performed the leading role in a National Public Radio broadcast, and the staged musical premiere in Boston at the North Shore Music Theatre in 2002.

She returned to the stage when she co-starred with Kelsey Grammer in Stephen Sondheim's "Sweeney Todd" in the Ahmanson Theater in Los Angeles, and she starred in the Chicago premiere of "HATS!" That new musical contains several songs she co-wrote with Sharon Vaughn.

Manchester also composed for Disney's "The Great Mouse Detective" and co-wrote the score for "Lady and the Tramp II."

She received the Governor's Award from the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences for her contributions to the music and recording arts. Her body of work to date as a singer-songwriter was a featured exhibit at the Lyman Allyn Art Museum, New London, Ct.

Her 16th CD is "When I Look Down That Road."

The artist said she never really has understood the term "re-inventing one's self."

"That said, I've tried so many styles of music, but to me they all come out of the same original impulse which is to create," she said. "And the songs I've sung for so long are monologues that have grown deeper as I've grown deeper into my life. It's a function of life to get more interesting as one becomes more aware and be more interested in one's journey."

Manchester doesn't have to struggle to continue to find drive and motivation for what she does. "I love the rigors of this life," she said. "I enjoy meeting fans after the shows. I love and respect my colleagues. I love to perform and share my stories. All of it has enriched my life."

The Best in Blues 2010

This past year was a good one for new blues records and many familiar names have made it to our 2010 top ten lists. Once again I've asked Dana Fargnoli to join me in this annual Sound Waves Magazine tradition. Dana, as many of you know, is the host of the "Out of the Blues" radio show on WCNI 90.9 FM every Saturday morning from 9:00 AM to 12:00 PM. I'm sure Dana will be playing these records throughout the month of January. Dana's number one is a live recording from the late great Luther Allison. My number one is not only a flawless acoustic recording but a loving tribute to Booker White by the always excellent Eric Bibb. So cue the drum roll and here we go for another year!

I would like to dedicate this year's top ten lists to the memory of Lil' Dave Thompson, Marva Wright, Solomon Burke, James Peterson, and Robin Rogers. I would also like to wish all readers of Sound Waves Magazine a very happy and healthy new year.
